Antibiotic Crisis

In 2000, a joint task force of FDA, the CDR, and the NIA was issued a warning, noting that infamous greedy drug companies have largely turned their backs on developing new antibiotics because there is no profit in it. What about the government funded programs using tax payers ' money? Well, thirteen years later, a Lancet editorial reports a new warning from the CDR issued in September, 2013, which for the first time put a number on deaths stemming from antibiotic resistance at 23,000 annually and more than 2 million illnesses. Rarely has modern medicine faced such a grave threat, say the authors. The warnings continue, because too little has been done to counter a growing threat, by you know who! Neither N.I.H.-C.D.C.-F.D.A. nor the industry. So, what about patient rights and civil liberties? Apparently, when someone spends billions of dollars and decades of research to find a cure, they are there to assert in the Robin Hood Style to steal it from the rich and greedy inventors and their investors, i.e., the patients who have any retirement plans or accounts with a stake in the drug industry.

Jury Orders Newegg To Pay $2.3 Million

TQP has sued hundreds of companies for infringement of their patent for Web encryption scheme of combining SSL with the RC4 cipher. Almost 140 companies have paid TQP a total of more than $45 million. But online retailer Newegg, which has sworn not to settle with "patent trolls" like TQP, took the case of RC4, combined with Lotus Notes, an early e-mail and social networking product, and a 1982 textbook called Cryptography and Data Security by Dorothy Denning, to a jury and lost.

Global Patent Prosecution Highway Pilot

Since 14th April 2008, IP Australia and the United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) have participated in a Patent Prosecution Highway (PPH) pilot for accelerated examination. However, from 6th January 2014, IP Australia will join the Global Patent Prosecution Highway (GPPH) pilot that will effectively replace the existing PPH pilot. The GPPH pilot will provide a common framework for multiple jurisdictions whereby an applicant can request accelerated examination of its application in any of the participating offices on the basis that corresponding claims are allowed in another participating office.
