THE INESCAPABLE FATE OF HUMANITY

INTRODUCTION

More than 5000 years ago, Lord Krishna told Arjuna at the beginning of the world war “Mahabharata War” explains the eternal cyclical nature of the war and peace as an inevitable human condition in which we all participate taking sides of evil and good in Bhagavad Gita Chapter 4, Verse 7-8:

యదా యదా హి ధర్మస్య గ్లానిర్భవతి భారత
 అభ్యుత్థానమధర్మస్య తదాత్మానాం స్రీజామ్యహమ్
 పరిత్రాణాయ నామహం వినాశాయ చ దుష్కృతాం
 ధర్మ స్థాపనార్థాయ సంభవామి యుగే యుగే

यदा यदा हि धर्मस्य ग्लानिर्भवति भारत ।
 अभ्युत्थानमधर्मस्य तदात्मानं सृजाम्यहम् ॥
 परित्राणाय साधूनां विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् ।
 धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे ॥

yadaa yadaa hi dharmasya glaanirbhavati bhaarata!
 abhyuththaanamadharmasya tadaatmaanaam srijaamyaham!!
 paritraanaaya saadhunaam vinaashaya cha dushkriitam !

“Whenever law and order in the society is disturbed, and chaos prevails, I create myself and I arrive from time to time to protect the good, destroy the evil, and to re-establish the law and order for humanity.
 (Whenever virtue subsides and wickedness prevails, I manifest Myself. To establish virtue, to destroy evil, to save the good I come from time to time)”

Good and evil are both abstract concepts whose existence is dependent on each other’s existence. Most philosophies accept the dualism of good and evil. Good coexists with evil and there can be nothing such as good unless there is evil and vice versa. It is clear that there is always a war between the good and the evil. Unfortunately, no human being is pure evil or pure good. We all are a mix of both and so are our societies. Yet, we try to define ourselves as good and our side is the good side, but the problem is to be able to figure out which side is the good because no such side exists. In the end, the winner is the good and loser is the evil, because the winner writes the history and also because the God must have been on the side of the good.

From a society’s perspective, whatever is beneficial to that society is good and whatever is detrimental to that society is evil. Therefore, when it is two imperial powers standing face to face on two sides of a borderline, each of them is good from their own perspective and bad from the opponent’s perspective. Accordingly, we create narratives that demonize our opponents and try to destroy them in our national interest. Thus every citizen and politician must fall in line with the national interest of the country in which they live, otherwise, it would be treason and unpatriotic that individual is a traitor. Accordingly, every country in this world has laid down laws that punish such treason, e.g.:

“Whoever, owing allegiance to the United States, levies war against them or adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort within the United States or elsewhere, is guilty of treason and shall suffer death, or shall be imprisoned not less than five years and fined under this title but not less than $10,000; and shall be incapable of holding any office under the United States.” 18 USC § 2381

“Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying War against them, or in adhering to their Enemies, giving them Aid and Comfort. No Person shall be convicted of Treason unless on the Testimony of two Witnesses to the same overt Act, or on Confession in open Court.

The Congress shall have Power to declare the Punishment of Treason, but no Attainder of Treason shall work Corruption of Blood, or Forfeiture except during the Life of the Person attainted.” The US Constitution, Article III, Section 3

“A Person charged in any State with Treason, Felony, or other Crime, who shall flee from Justice, and be found in another State, shall on Demand of the executive Authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having Jurisdiction of the Crime.” The US Constitution, Article IV, Section 2

THE GREAT GAME
THE STRUGGLE FOR EMPIRE IN CENTRAL ASIA IS A CENTURIES’ OLD STRATEGY IS NOT A NEW STRATEGY

“In playing this game, Russia runs no risk. What does it matter to her whether a few thousand British troops are on her side of the Hindu Kush or not? She knows that they can never strike at any vital point of her dominions, and so can afford to look on and laugh in her sleeve whilst our generals add 50,000 or 60,000 square miles to the British Empire, and the Indian Finance Minister racks his brain to discover some new source of revenue from which to pay the price of their militant patriotism.” Henry Bathurst Hanna, 1895¹

Throughout the nineteenth century, British governments were worried by the continuing march southward by the Russian empire in Central Eurasia. In the early part of the century, the focus of strategic concern was Constantinople. Later, as czarist armies overran Central Asia, attention shifted to Persia, to Afghanistan in the Indian Continent and to the mountain passes of the Himalayas. By the last quarter of the nineteenth century, it was a common assumption in Europe that the next great war -the inevitable war- was going to be the final showdown between Britain and Russia².

For 100 years, Russia had been expanding east and south at a rate, it has been estimated, of 55 square miles a day. The process seemed inexorable, but Britain was determined to stop it before the British Indian Empire was threatened. The rivalry between the two, entitled “The Great Game” in the British Press, ranged from Europe to the Far East. On the borders of India - which Russia never really intended to invade - the “Game” led Britain into military adventures in both Afghanistan and Tibet - involvement that was largely unnecessary and disastrous³.

On this vast diplomatic chessboard, India was a vital piece. The British valued India more highly than any of their other imperial possessions; for its lucrative trade, for British investment there, for the troops India provided and the commanding position she gave in southern Asia and, perhaps most of all, because, to lose India would ruin the reputation for invincibility on which British imperial rule depended².

The British were aware that India, with its population of nearly 300 million and area as large as Europe, could not be held by force alone. To hold India, the burdens of Empire had to be light enough and the benefits of Empire great enough, to make British rule acceptable to the subject population. Hatred of Russia was instinctive with the English and crippling of the great Northern Power regarded as essential to the English welfare⁴.

The Great Game continues with the largest coalition of a few countries less than 20 out of 200 countries in the world against a the Russian Federation, the first after the largest illegal coalition of a few countries less than 20 out of 200 countries in the world against Iraq⁵, resulting in the largest expulsion of Russian diplomats to send a signal from the British Lion to the Russian Bear THAT BREXIT DID NOT DIMINISH THE BRITISH LION'S POWER.

INTEREST. Surprise, surprise, heroin use has dramatically increased across the US (AMZONE), spreading to groups it hadn't previously reached, and deaths from overdose have soared, according to a new federal report. The Food and Drug Administration and the CDC analyzed data from the National Survey on Drug Use and Health from 2002–2013. Heroin use in the United States increased 63 percent from 2002 through 2013. This increase occurred among a broad range of demographics, including men and women, most age groups, and all income levels. What is interesting is that heroin is diffusing throughout society to groups that it hasn't touched before to benefit AMZONE. This report captures thousands of Americans, but misses the military, homeless and prison populations, understating the extent of the heroin abuse problem. Heroin costs roughly 5 times less than prescription opiates on the street. Heroin is an opioid drug made from morphine, a natural substance taken from the seed pod of the various opium poppy plants grown in AFGHANISTAN and PAKISTAN, which increased production and became major suppliers of opiates to Western Europe and North America in the mid-1970s. In July 2000, Taliban leader Mullah Mohammed Omar, collaborating with the United Nations to eradicate heroin production in Afghanistan, declared that growing poppies was un-Islamic, resulting in a 99% reduction in the area of opium poppy farming in Taliban-controlled areas, roughly three quarters of the world's supply of heroin at the time, one of the world's most successful anti-drug campaigns, which was quickly ended by the American invasion in 2002.

Putin opponents have a strange habit of finding themselves at the wrong place like London at the wrong time and ending up being murdered, possibly connected to a dossier alleging connections between President Trump's campaign staff and Kremlin officials that was produced by a former British spy and shared with the FBI⁶, while the UK government is manufacturing its Sergey Skripal nerve agent case for 'action' on Russia⁷, without any real evidence, similar to the case of Alexander Litvinenko who was certainly poisoned, but the public inquiry chairman Sir Robert Owen was not sure that FSB or Putin was involved in the murder⁸. Based on this strong evidence of probabilities and possibilities, the West must continue the Centuries-Old War against the Federation of Russia in the Never-Ending Great Game of Empires.

Discrimination against aliens, foreigners, immigrants, minorities, and women is deeply rooted in the human society. Discrimination is often based on ignorance, prejudices and negative stereotypes⁹. People fear the strange or unknown, and they react with suspicion or even violence to anyone whose appearance, culture¹⁰ or behavior is unfamiliar.

To discriminate against someone is to exclude that person from the full enjoyment of their political, civic, economic, social or cultural rights and freedoms. Attitudes, actions, or institutional practices that marginalize anyone are discrimination, one form of which is racial discrimination that continues to exist in human cultures with historical roots in beliefs in the superiority of one group over another to justify discrimination, and spread it across the world through colonization and imperialism. Other forms of discrimination include sexism, ageism, homophobia, religious intolerance, and xenophobia, a hatred of foreigners or foreign countries. Segregation is a form of discrimination sanctioned by the government and/or religious authority imposed by law or by custom with separation of castes, tribes, or ethnic groups. There have been official forms of segregation in the West (America and Europe), for example, Jews were once isolated in ghettos, and today many Roma people, refugees, and immigrants are forced by hostile behavior and economic segregation to live in separate communities, creating poverty and hurdles in alleviating poverty¹¹.

Discrimination contradicts a basic principle of human rights: that all people are equal in dignity and entitled to the same fundamental rights. This principle is repeated in every fundamental human rights document (e.g. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights Article 2, Convention on the Rights of the Child Article 2, The European Convention on Human Rights Article 14 and Article 1 of Protocol No. 12). Most national Constitutions also include provisions against discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin is contrary to the Constitutional principles and policies of any representative form of government. The obligation of the Government to promote and ensure equal opportunity for all qualified persons, without regard to race, creed, color, or national origin, employed or seeking employment¹². Today, we have broken down several barriers through dismantling the system of slavery and segregation in the world, only to see that have not achieved an egalitarian society where all human beings are treated equals.

Unfortunately, some are more equal than others, as usual! Today, in US we have various groups that are discriminated against and enslaved, such as a group of people branded as “illegal aliens” and “criminal aliens.” We have in US a system of discrimination in the policy of immigration under US Citizenship and Immigration Services (CIS) agency and the implementing authority US Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE). CIS and ICE together have the responsibility to run the immigration policy laid down by the Congress. The current policy of US is discriminatory, capricious, and injustice., and yet we are the beacon of hope for the rest of the world running away from the death, oppression, and misery caused by US directly or indirectly. The schizophrenic approach of our immigration system is evident in every aspect of the implementation of the Immigration and Naturalization Act (INA), but one example of comparison between two types of visas should suffice to explain the malady of system in US: one visa is called Lottery colloquially and Diversity officially with 50,000 visas to give away to any person qualified, and the other is called Employment Based Extraordinary Ability Category with 65,000 visas to save - NOT give away to any person qualified¹³.

Both visas depend on arbitrary and capricious determination by the USCIS, in which a person without any specific qualifications gets a permanent visa in Lotto quota, while a budding scientist with a PhD or a talented artist suffers through atrocious and arbitrary determination of national and international recognition of that person under 10 categories of arbitrary criteria, unless that person is a Nobel Laureate. Have you ever seen a Nobel Laureate in mid-twenties? Yes, indeed, you heard of a couple of geniuses or political shoe pieces like Mala Yousafzai (2014 Nobel Peace Prize, at 17) for surviving an attempt on her life by Taliban the SWAT district of Pakistan. Then there was William Laurence Bragg at the age of 23 who shared the Nobel Prize with his 52-year old father who earned the Professorship of Mathematics and Physics in the University of Adelaide at the age of 23. The USCIS would have rejected the father's EB1 application at the age of 25 (just a professor!), but would have awarded the son the much coveted prize of entry into the beacon of hope at the age of 25 (Nobel Laureate) or to Malala for surviving the attack by Taliban (student) protégé of US, while millions are maimed and survived the Western campaigns against terrorism in the East who get no mention by the Nobel committee, but are considered refugees and threat to the Western society – they don't get visa easily. Except the exceptions terror survivor and son sharing the prize with the father, usually an old person who is ready to retire and die gets the Nobel prize and sometimes posthumously, and they don't have any interest in relocating to the beacon of hope only to be treated as aliens, unless of course, there is world war going on in their country to betray their country to protect the humanity.

So, 14,418,063 per year visas to give away in the lottery¹⁴, and 39,000 visas to Nobel Laureates or equivalent notoriety determined by the UCSIS subjectively. Once you get the visa, the lotto winner and the Nobel Laureate are equal in the eyes of the law – alien immigrants detainable and deportable for any infraction that may be considered subjectively "moral turpitude" by US. And if you are suspicious looking, like wearing a turban, burqa, sari, lungi, or a red or white dot or mark on the forehead, you may be simply shot and killed, using the second amendment right that we so dearly cherish. And if you don't wear any of that you may be a cleanshaven terrorist to be watched and reported to the police and ICE, as it is our duty and responsibility to be eternally vigilant to protect our cherished Western democracy and freedom, the envy of the East.

Health and nutrition are human rights, and healthy populations are a major prerequisite for productive economies. Even people in the wealthiest countries aren't getting enough nutrients. Some 85% of Americans lack essential vitamins (Hidden hunger: America's growing malnutrition epidemic, Barbara Bush, daughter of former US president George W Bush, and Hugh Welsh, president of DSM North America). More than 30 million Americans experience hunger regularly or are at risk of going hungry and about 8.5 million Americans, including nearly 3 million children, experience hunger on a daily basis (Malnutrition in America, Oct 03, 2017)¹⁵.

How do we deal with these subjective determinations subconscious, inherent, innate biases with which human beings operate on a daily basis? There are several ways and opportunities available to correct any type of disparities in any society. However, some are detrimental in the long run, as they create groups and cause ghettoization of the society. Affirmative Action, Reservations, and Quotas are such instruments that serve to remove certain disparities, while creating certain other disparities and segregation. In general, these instruments divide the society into two broad groups – left leaning and right leaning – without much of a middle ground for reconciliation, in addition to creating a multitude of new groups and divisions in the society. As we break down the old barriers on one hand, we create new barriers on the other, which remains to be a cyclical and eternal phenomenon in the nature in general, and among human beings, in particular.

Applying the same principles of good and evil, each group must decide what is in its best interest and fight for it. As a result, we have another eternal war within a society or country.

Straights of Constantinople, “the key to Russia’s house”, as Tzar Nicholas put it to Lord Salisbury the British Prime Minister in 1896. After the Crimean War 1854-56, which nearly ruined Russia as a great power, and the Indian Mutiny 1857-58 (see this website), which thoroughly alarmed the British, both powers felt acutely vulnerable. In their redoubled efforts to defend their interests, they employed an armory of policies: competition for political influence at the courts of the Sultan of Turkey, the Shah of Persia and the Amir of Afghanistan; trade and investment for political ends; strategic railways, military expeditions; and perhaps most important of all, allies in Europe. In the second half of the 19th Century, Britain could usually count on Austria-Hungary, and sometimes on France and Germany, to help frustrate Russia in the Straights and Mediterranean. In the end, the fate of both Russian and British Empires had to be resolved in Europe, where the players of the Great Game sat.

⁵ No weapons of mass destruction were found in Iraq. The United States corralled a coalition against Iraq in 2003 based on allegations without any proof and illegally invaded a sovereign state to find the alleged presence of weapons of mass destruction (WMD) and continues to search for the WMD in various graves in Iraq, in vain, resulting in hundreds of thousands of Iraqi deaths and millions displaced. On November 6, 2006, Saddam Hussein was found guilty of crimes against humanity and sentenced to death by hanging, and was executed on December 30, 2006, BUT NO WMD were found in Iraq IN THE OPERATION IRAQI FREEDOM OF SHOCK AND AWE, DESPITE France, Germany, Russia, China, India, and other countries’ objections to this illegal war based on sexed up intelligence related to the imminent threat posed by Iraq. NATO as an organization had no role in the decision to undertake the campaign or to conduct it.

War in Iraq: Not a Humanitarian Intervention

⁶ According to a tally by USA Today and British journalist Sarah Hurst, as of May 2017, “38 prominent Russians” were “victims of unsolved murders or suspicious deaths since the beginning of 2014[6].” Prior to 2014, the list of mysterious deaths of Putin critics / investigators / Russian government opposition is even more extensive, including those of former intelligence officer Alexander Litvinenko (the former Russian spy was poisoned with a cup of tea in a London hotel, where the CIA has its station on the fourth floor, next door to the heavily guarded US embassy[6]. Sir Robert Owen, the public inquiry chairman, said he was not sure that FSB was involved), human rights lawyer Stanislav Markelov (supporter of Chechnya, gunned down by masked gunman[6], like other the murders of supporters of Chechnya like Anna Politkovskaya, Natalia Estemirova), business tycoon Boris Berezovsky (found hanged in his ex-wife Galina’s house in Ascot, Great Britain. Berezovsky’s apparent suicide[6] became yet another case in a chain of “inexplicable” deaths on British soil that the United Kingdom’s authorities are not rushing to re-investigate, keeping them top secret <https://sputniknews.com/europe/201803161062608602-mysterious-deaths-UK-kelly/>), journalist Natalia Estemirova (kidnapped, shot dead and body dumped in the woods) and perhaps, most notably, Sergei Magnitsky, who was brutally beaten and denied medical care while in police custody in 2009 and whose name lives on in the form of a sanctions act bearing his name that Trump seems to have absolutely no interest in.

⁸ Report into the death of Alexander Litvinenko, Chairman: Sir Robert Owen January 2016

Statement by THE CHAIRMAN: Over nine years have elapsed since his death; and it is appropriate that I should explain shortly why it has taken so long for a full enquiry into his death to be completed. ... The law does not permit evidence to be taken in what are known as secret or closed sessions at an inquest. But the government material was of such sensitivity that it could not be produced in any form of public or open hearing. The material was therefore necessarily excluded from the inquest proceedings under the legal principle known as public interest immunity. ... The advantage of a public inquiry over an inquest was that the rules governing an inquiry allow for sensitive evidence to be heard in closed session. However, the Home Secretary declined my request. ... The findings of fact and the conclusions that I have drawn from the facts are based upon the entirety of the evidence that I have seen and heard, both open and closed. They are mine and mine alone. on 13 October 2006, he [Alexander Litvinenko] and his family were granted British citizenship. 41 days later, Alexander Litvinenko died at University College Hospital, London. The immediate cause of death was a cardiac arrest from which the medical staff at the hospital were unable to resuscitate him. But the cardiac arrest was the result of an acute radiation syndrome caused by his having ingested approximately 4.4 giga Becquerel of polonium-210. The evidence indicates that there was more than one intake of polonium-210. The second, and fatal, ingestion occurred on 1 November 2006, the sixth anniversary of his arrival in the United Kingdom seeking asylum. The first, which had been about a hundredth of the size, had occurred some 14 days earlier. The evidence establishes that Mr Litvinenko ingested the fatal dose whilst drinking tea from a teapot contaminated with polonium-210 in the Pine Bar of the Millennium Hotel in the West End of London in the afternoon of 1 November in the company of Andrei Lugovoy and Dmitri Kovtun. I am sure that Mr Lugovoy and Mr Kovtun placed the polonium-210 into the teapot at the Pine Bar and did so with the intention of poisoning Mr Litvinenko. I am also sure that the two men made the earlier attempt to poison Mr Litvinenko, also using polonium-210, at a meeting on 16 October 2006....

I have concluded that there is a strong probability that when Mr Lugovoy poisoned Mr Litvinenko, he did so under the direction of the FSB, the Federal Security Service of the Russian Federation. I have further concluded that Mr Kovtun was also acting under FSB direction, possibly indirectly through Mr Lugovoy, but probably in the knowledge that that was the body for which he was acting. I have further concluded that the FSB operation to kill Mr Litvinenko was probably approved by Mr Patrushev, then head of the FSB, and also by President Putin (emphasis added. Note: Contrary to clear statement with "surety" of poisoning backed by evidence of polonium 210, the perfunctory and conclusory statements of "probability" and "possibility" are without any supporting evidence).
